Summarize the assigned article in one paragraph. Make sure to quote and interpret at least one statistic.

To better understand the changing landscape and emerging challenges of the nursing profession, RNnetwork recently conducted a follow-up study of its groundbreaking 2016 survey, which painted a portrait of a modern nurse and examined different aspects of the national nursing shortage. The results revealed many of the concerning statistics from the previous study were either static or growing worse: nurse burnout, overwork and harassment continue to affect nurses and impact patient care in 2018. Nurse burnout is continually acknowledged as a particular problem in the medical profession, and as the nursing shortage continues, there seems to be no clear solution in sight. RNnetwork polled more than 900 nurses working in the United States for insight into modern opinions and attitudes about nurse burnout, work-life balance, mental health and harassment in the workplace. A recent study conducted by RNnetwork found that nurse burnout, overwork, and harassment continue to be significant issues in the nursing profession. In 2018, 62% of nurses reported feeling regularly burned out, and 44% believed that burnout affected their work performance. The nursing shortage is exacerbating these problems, with 49% of
