Analysing Public Policies through a Lens of Federalism.

Kentucky Covid 19 response

I would like to present my creative writing related to covid 19 response. During the pandemic era of covid 19, every single state response in a unique way. According to World health organization "Coronavirus disease (COVID-19) is an infectious disease caused by the SARS-CoV-2 virus".

Numerous factors contribute to COVID-19 problems in the United States. These include social, cultures, political beliefs, public policies, institutional arrangements, governmental structures, and individual behaviour. The government's responsibilities in the pandemic response are vital because since the beginning of the pandemic, we have seen an increase in government intervention in every facet of our society. Public officials at all levels must develop policy solutions to protect the health and safety of their communities. According to a survey, most Americans (62%) believe that other advanced countries have responded to the COVID-19 pandemic more successfully than the United State (liou & Liou, 2022).

Governor Andy Besher of Kentucky proclaimed a state of emergency to put public health and safety first. Guidelines for high-risk populations were issued by the governor. These included restricting patient visits to nursing homes, ordering school districts to close on short notice and start NTI, permitting more people to telework if feasible, establishing new Kentucky unemployment insurance procedures, restricting the operations of restaurants, bars, spas, gyms, and other public spaces, among other things (National Governors Association, 2020). Numerous adjustments and difficulties were brought about by the epidemic, both beneficial and detrimental to daily life. I believe that Andy Besher, our governor, handled the impacts of COVID-19 in the quite well
